 College of DuPage

Elmhurst College

Who should enroll in the program?

Students who are interested in philosophy and are looking to transfer to a four-year school and major in philosophy.

Students who are interested in going to law school.

Students who graduated from COD as long as they complete an Associate in Arts degree with the required courses.

Program Overview

College of DuPage students complete an associate's degree and meet Elmhurst College requirements.

Elmhurst College will accept a maximum of 70 credits from College of DuPage, including 12 to 16 semester hours of philosophy course credits. All transferable courses must be college level and satisfy Elmhurst College eligibility requirements.

Participants in the 2+2 program who plan to earn a law degree may also choose to participate in Elmhurst's partnership with The John Marshall Law School. Students can earn associate, bachelor and JD degrees in just six years.

The financial advantage

With this 2+2 program, students pay College of DuPage tuition for COD courses during the first two years, a significant savings over a traditional four-year college. Transfer scholarship opportunities make the B.A. degree even more affordable.

Advising

Start planning your transition as early as your first semester at COD by following an academic transfer plan designed specifically for Philosophy. Receive expert advising from counselors and advisors on both campuses.
